

INTERVIEW A

MASTER ARTIST

Master artists can be found within your own family – you can talk to your parents, guardians, grandparents, aunts and uncles, brothers, sisters, and cousins, or even a friend to find someone who has a special interest or ability. You may find someone who has a passion for photography, baking, jewelry making, banjo playing, or leather work. Ask them if you can set up an interview to learn more about their work. A good interviewer has a few questions ready to ask before they begin. Below are some questions to get you started. Be sure to add more questions of your own. After the interview, write up a paragraph about what you learned about their passion or ability. You can share it with family and friends. And you can share your interview with us by sending it to info@birthplaceofcountrymusic.org!
